

ABSTRACT

This study aims to examine the aspects of corrupt intentions including pressure, opportunity, rationalization, capacity, social/organizational culture, narcissism, machiavellianism, psychopathy, and the effectiveness of law enforcement.

This research is quantitative research with the populations are structural employees in the City X. The sampling technique is census. Data sourced from primary data or a questionnaire, while the measurement of variables uses Likert scale. The analysis method uses SEM PLS analysis.

The results show that capacity and effectiveness of law enforcement are empirically proven to have no effect on the corrupt intentions. Suggestions for the City X are recommended to add the personality assessment. City Government X is expected to create a positive culture. In addition, the development of research measuring tools need to be carried out for further research. Subsequent research can also expand the object of research in the private sector while still using the fraud star theory.
