

ABSTRACT

The aim of this study are to analyze the effect of Current Ratio (CR), Debt to Equity Ratio (DER), Return on Asset (ROA), and Inflation on Stock Price. This study was taken because there are still difference with similar study, and there is a difference between real estate and property research with other existitng studies.

This research was conducted using secondary data. The sample, consist of 12 real estate and property company, was selected by means of purposive sampling technique. The analysis method used is data panel regression analysis.

The result of the study show that DER and ROA doesn't have a significant impact on the stock prices, while CR have significant and positive impact on stock price and inflation have significant and negative impact on stock price. The adjusted R-squared in this study is 0.7568 which mean that the independent variable capable of explaining the movement of dependent variable by 75.68%.

Keywords : Stock Price, Current Ratio, Debt to Equity Ratio, Return on Asset, and Inflation