

ABSTRACT

National development can not be separated from the development of each sector that forms a. Regional economic development undertaken through the management of potential and existing resources in each region can increase economic growth through Gross Regional Domestic Product (GRDP). The rate of growth Regional GDP of Central Java Province is lower compared to West Java and East Java Provinces. Economic growth through Regional GDP by several developing factors.

This study aims to analyze the influence of investment, labor and Local Own Revenue (PAD) to Regional GDP Central Java Province. The method used in this study is the analysis of multiple linear regression (Ordinary Least Square) with the time series 2012-2015 and cross section data 35 Districts / Cities Central Java Province.

The result of research on R^2 test means that Investment, Manpower and PAD are able to explain Regional GDP variable equal to 76 percent, while the remaining 24 percent is explained other variables. In the F test obtained F statistics of 129.29 then obtained F statistics $>$ F table. Then on investment variable, labor and Local Own Revenue (PAD) have a positive and significant effect to Regional GDP of Central Java Province. The higher realization of investment, labor and Local Own Revenue (PAD), the higher the Regional GDP of Central Java Province. Then the most dominant variable in this study is the Local Revenue (PAD).

Key Words : Regional GDP, Growth, Regional Revenue, Investment, Labor