

ABSTRACT

This study aims to examine investment opportunity set, corporate governance, leverage, firm size, past performance, and type of industry toward firm performance. Independent variable used in this study are investment opportunity set (IOS), non executive directors, insider ownership, leverage, firm size, past firm performance, dan industry, while the dependent variable is firm performance.

The population of this study are manufacturer and consumer goods companies listed in Indonesian Stock Exchange (IDX) from 2012 until 2013. Based on quote sampling method, the total of sample obtained are 143 companies. The analysis method used to test the independent variables influence the dependent variable is the regression.

The results showed that investment opportunity set is positive significant toward firm performance, non executive directors is positive not significant toward firm performance, insider ownership is positive not significant toward firm performance, leverage is negative significant toward firm performance, firm size is positive not significant toward firm performance, past firm performance is positive significant toward firm performance, and industry is not give effect significantly toward firm performance.

Keywords: investment opportunity set, non executive directors, insider ownership, leverage, firm size, industry, firm performance