

ABSTRACT

The increase of life expectancy reflects that one of development indicators in the welfare and health sectors being succeed. It will lead to an increasing number of elderly people. The phenomenon is the elderly population who still have to work in order not to depend on other residents getting higher. The elderly are actively looking for job opportunities to meet their needs for life and improve their standard of living and their family's economic status.